BRITAIN TURNS TO THE FRONT!

THE MOOD IN THE country is changing. Throughout 1993 more and more people turned their backs on the 'politically correct' philosophy of the establishment and its political parties and looked towards patriotic and nationalist-based policies as the solution to our country's difficulties.

There has been two decades of anti-nationalist policies from consecutive governments backed up by an avalanche of propaganda in the media and in our universities, colleges and schools but it has failed to change what the British people feel in their hearts. For twenty years they have kept silent and paid lip-service to political correctness. Many have been unwilling to 'step out of line' and question the anti-British and anti-family philosophy for fear of being victimised or ridiculed as a political leper. But now things have changed.

The first signs that there was a shift in public opinion was monitored at National Front Head Office during the summer when there was a steady increase in requests for more information about Britain's only democratic nationalist political party.

Then in seven days at the beginning of November there was hard evidence that a change was taking place when in two distinctly different parts of the country National Front candidates scored council election results dramatically better than anything the NF had achieved for many years.

In the Princes End Ward, Dudley in Sandwell, West Midlands John Lord shocked the political establishment when he polled 274 votes, 16.3% of the total votes cast and pushed the Liberal Democrats, who had called the election, into fourth place. This result was more than double the previous best NF vote in the West Midlands and sent shock waves through the ranks of the other parties. In the days that followed National Front spokesmen took part in a whole range of interviews for all sections of the media.

The Dudley branch of the National Front and their candidate John Lord worked particularly hard during the campaign to achieve what the local paper called 'an astonishing result'.

Before the 'politically correct' establishment could recover from the result in Dudley, the National Front struck again. This time in the Feltham South Ward for Hounslow Council in West London. There the NF had already been achieving very good press coverage when it had been discovered that their candidate had previously been an active member of the Conservative Party and still technically retained his membership. When interviewed about his defection to the National Front, Ray O'Connor told the press and television,

"I am disillusioned with the Government's policy on Europe, and with the continued level of immigration into Britain".

By Our Political Correspondent

On the night of the count, the local Tories were looking very nervous as the results started to come in, and well they might have been. Ray O'Connor polled an excellent 264 votes, 10.2% of the total number cast, nearly three times as many as the NF's previous best in West London and only 4% behind the Conservatives.

These excellent results in different parts of the country have given the National Front a tremendous boost and a very real political platform from which to launch the campaign for the May local elections. In the space of seven days the National Front re-established itself in the main political arena in Britain and reinforced the NF claim to be Britain's fourth largest political party and the fastest growing political movement.

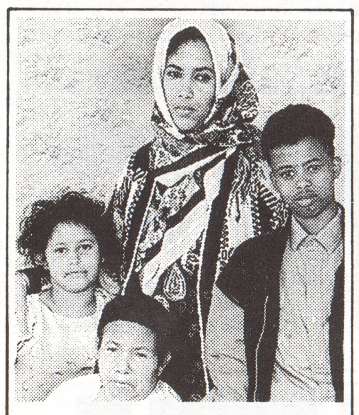
REFUGEES 'LIVID' OVER TREATMENT

A FAMILY of refugees who arrived in Britain from Somalia have described their treatment from the Department of Social Security as 'disgraceful'.

Amina Saeed Mohamed, her disabled mother, and her three children were immediately given a Manchester City council house in Lucas Walk, Beswick but she was refused an application for a grant of £1,500 from the Social Fund for curtains and carpets.



REFUGEES?: Amina and family

Amina was livid and complained that her sister who had arrived in Britain a month earlier from Somalia was given a council house and £1,150 to furnish it. Manchester secretary of the Somali Association, Omar Barudi, agreed it was 'miserly' behaviour and said that when Somali refugees first started arriving in Manchester the DSS were very generous but now their attitude was hardening.

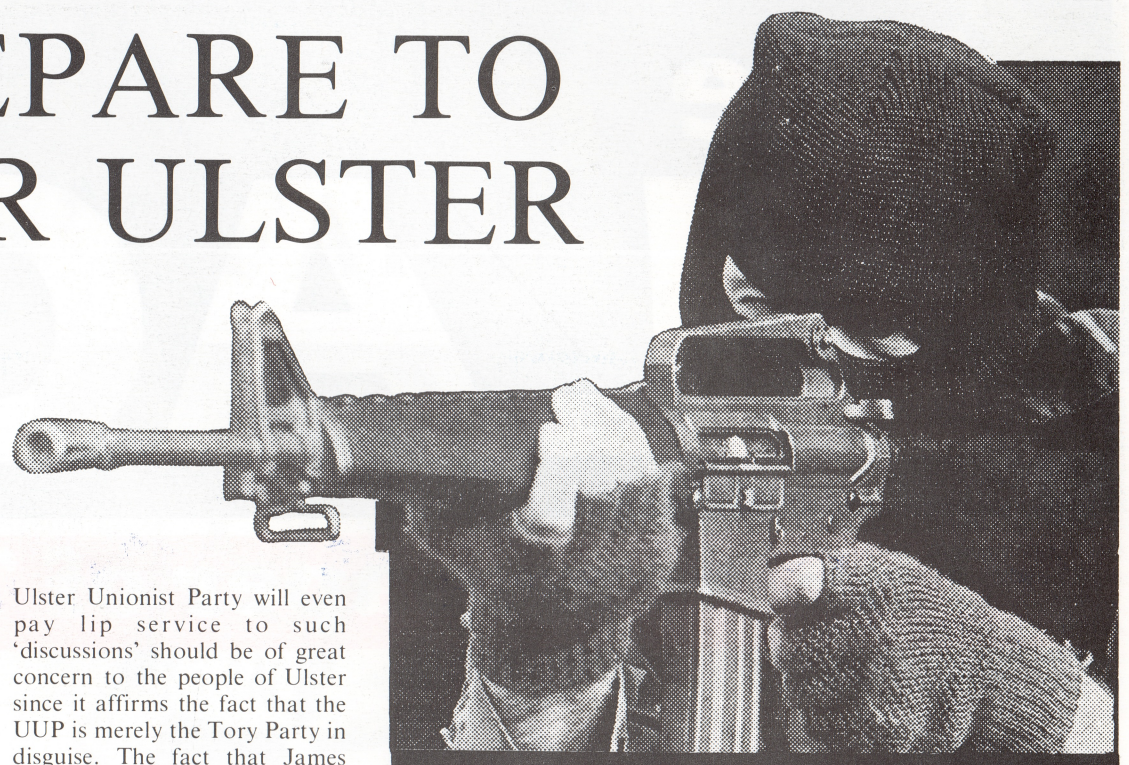
WILMOT: Ethnic joke cleansing

POLICE UNDER FIRE!

POLICE OFFICERS in Manchester, already under pressure as they try to cope with spiralling violent crime in areas such as Moss Side, are now up against it from 'political correctness' within the force.

David Wilmot, head of the Greater Manchester force, has launched a campaign to hound policemen who express doubts about the wisdom of Britain's move to a multi-racial society. Any officers who make negative comments concerning ethnic minorities will face disciplinary charges. Even officers telling jokes, that do not have a positive image of ethnic minorities, will be punished.

TORIES PREPARE TO SURRENDER ULSTER TO EIRE



"LIARS OUGHT TO have good memories", so goes the old saying. Unfortunately, it is the honest people, the ones who are lied to, who seem to suffer from amnesia. How else can one explain the shock and outrage of the people of Northern Ireland at the revelations that the British Government has been lying over its shady dealings with the IRA.

Did they really expect anything else from the plummy, shifty, elephantine liar Mayhew or from the evasive, pooterish liar Major (nee liar Ball)? Have they forgotten the treachery of the odious Willie Whitelaw when he played footsie with the IRA at his London flat while they were killing our people? It is honest men that need good memories.

For can anyone doubt that it is the intention of the Government to sell out the Loyalists? The only question in their minds is how they can do it and still save their deceitful faces. Talks with the IRA indeed. What possible justification can there be for talks with the terrorists except discussing the best means of betraying our fellow countrymen.

Thus we have seen the relentless hype about 'peace plans' designed to make honest Loyalists seem obstructive and to be denying everyone a peaceful solution. Thus liar Major's fulsome and stomach-churning praise for the 'courage' of SDLP leader John Hume for committing treason by engaging in discussions with Sinn Fein's Gerry Adams. They know full well that Sinn Fein is the IRA Mark 2 and the SDLP the IRA Mark 3. The SDLP exists only because it has the IRA's permission to operate in its no-go areas and then only because the aims of the two organisations are identical.

Lord Fitt, formerly Gerry Fitt, Northern Ireland Labour Party MP, founded the SDLP as a vehicle for addressing the grievances of Ulster Catholics. He has often placed the present SDLP in its proper context by describing how he was forced out of the Party by Hume and his gang and how the new party was hi-jacked by people whose only purpose was to undermine the position of N. Ireland within the United Kingdom, just like the IRA.

To decribe Hume as a 'nationalist' is an offence against the English language. He is a British citizen and lives in a country that is an integral part of the United Kingdom. If he were a nationalist, he would be flying the Union Jack not the Irish Tricolour. He wants British territory to be annexed by a foreign country. He is therefore a traitor and a subversive.

So when he proposes 'discussions' between Loyalists and the IRA, one is obliged to ask just what they are supposed to discuss since the aims of each are totally incompatible and irreconcilable. To the Loyalists, the proposition that Eire should annex Ulster now, or at some indefinite date in the future, is not even worthy of discussion. To the traitors, it is the only thing that will buy them off.

The fact that the 'official' Ulster Unionist Party will even pay lip service to such 'discussions' should be of great concern to the people of Ulster since it affirms the fact that the UUP is merely the Tory Party in disguise. The fact that James Molyneaux expresses his misgivings by stating "even the middle class and professional people are anxious" is proof enough of that. He is enthusiastic about the 'devolved Assembly' offered as a carrot to the donkeys of the Ulster ruling class by a Government that is eager to keep them at arms length. This assembly would, of course, be elected by proportional representation, to ensure minority representation, something that the Government refuses to accept in Britain.

If, as the liars Mayhew and Major allege, their contacts with the IRA were merely to talk about how the terrorists were to lay down their arms, they would be pointless. The IRA is not some monolithic disciplined organisation but a ragbag of homicidal psychopaths. The Provisional IRA exists because it split from the 'Official' IRA when that organisation abandoned murder as a means to a political end. If the Provisionals became dovelike they would split again. If the Provisionals wish to call-off their campaign of terror, all they have to do is to say so and stop killing people. No discussions are necessary unless they are about the price the British Government will pay.

So when the Warrington whiners pray for peace instead of vengeance, the IRA smells victory. When the British Government whimpers its 'yearning for peace' the IRA can taste it. When the British Government stays silent while tinpot Irish Premier, Albert Reynolds, demands concessions for his good offices and wears a triumphant smirk when he claims "a role in the Government of Northern Ireland" then the IRA have every reason to suppose that victory is assured.

Just think of it.

- The Irish rely on us to buy their products.
- We pay them a massive financial subsidy via the EEC.
- They export their unemployed to us and we pay them benefits and put them in our council houses.
- In Northern Ireland we pay benefits to the families of IRA terrorists who have been jailed for murdering our people.
- They even have the right to sit in our Parliament.

Now, to top it all, they make territorial demands on us without even being rebuked. When faced with a Government so effete and cowardly, why should the IRA not expect victory.

For all the components of the sell-out are in place. The scenario is as follows. First the Government establishes a 'devolved Assembly' in Northern Ireland. After a little while it is announced that British troops are being withdrawn, thus giving credence to the IRA claim that they are a foreign army of occupation. Some time after that the devolved Assembly will collapse in chaos. This will be followed by a renewal of IRA terrorism. The British Government will refuse to send troops on the grounds that it hasn't worked in the past and would merely exacerbate the situation. The Loyalists will then hit back at the IRA and the Irish Government will send troops to "protect the nationalist community" just as they were on the verge of doing 25 years ago.

The sell-out will then be complete and the aim of the IRA achieved. The thousands of soldiers and policemen who lost their lives at the hands of Republican terrorists will have been betrayed along with the loyal men, women and children of Ulster.

A Scenario for Surrender

- ★ Government establishes a 'devolved Assembly' in Northern Ireland
- ★ British Troops are withdrawn
- ★ 'Devolved Assembly' collapses in chaos
- ★ Renewal of IRA terrorism
- ★ British Government refuses to send in troops for fear of exacerbating the situation.
- ★ Loyalists hit back at the IRA
- ★ Irish Government sends in troops to 'protect the nationalist community'
- ★ British Government accedes to a United Ireland.

BRING PATTEN HOME NOW!

THE ANTICS of the Governor of Hong Kong Chris Patten are not only a great embarrassment to Britain but could in fact put British lives at risk.

His so-called reform proposals in the face of China's opposition threatens to make the hand-over of Hong Kong to China in 1997 a bloodbath rather than the peaceful return of territory to the motherland that it should be.

China was always going to set up its own 'shadow' administration ready to assume office when the Union flag was lowered and the job of the British Government should have been to ensure the transition went without a hitch.

Instead our Government has gone all out to antagonise Peking and now we face the real prospect of confrontation. China's foreign minister, Qian Qichen, has warned that repossession of Hong Kong before the official 1997 handover could take place unless the situation improves. To back up his statements ten thousand troops of the People's Liberation Army are massed on the Chinese border with the colony.

The thought of British soldiers dying defending a piece of China from the Chinese is unthinkable. The thought of a million Hong Kong Chinese refugees heading for Britain is equally unpaletable.

The Government should bring Patten home now and replace him with someone who has a real understanding for the Chinese position with regard to Hong Kong and can ensure a trouble-free handover on or before 1997.

CHRIS PATTEN: His antics could lead Britain into conflict with China.

The Dignity of Remembrance Day Ensured as NF Switch March Off

LAST NOVEMBER'S Remembrance Day was marked by several local ceremonies by National Front branches as well as the main national service at The Cenotaph in London.

In Derby the local committee laid a wreath at the City's main war memorial and in Yarmourth a similar ceremony took place. There a local councillor, Mr. P. Dye, wrote to the Yarmouth Mercury complaining that the National Front service was allowed to take place. His letter drew a stinging response from local NF organiser Tom Holmes whose reply appeared in the paper the following week . . .

"Three of our members present were ex-servicemen representing the Army, Royal Air Force and Royal Marines. Two of these served in the last World War. Not only were we honouring our dead in general, but I was in particular paying hommage to my uncle, Edward Holmes, 2nd Lieutenant, 2nd Lancs and Yorks, who was killed in action on September 19th 1918 and whose name is engraved on the War Memorial at Yarmouth. All of the Holmes listed in the Commemmoration Book in Yarmouth Library are relatives of mine".

In Hertfordshire wreaths were laid at the War Memorial in both Hemel Hempstead and Chesham. The main national parade took place as normal in central London, although by agreement with the Police, we moved our assembly point from Victoria to Whitehall Place. This move left our opponents wandering around Victoria vainly looking for someone to shout at.

After forming up our parade marched to the Cenotaph where we held our non-denominational Christian service conducted by Mr. John Hamilton of the Bolton Branch of the National Front. Wreaths were laid by NF Chairman Mr. Ian Anderson and by President of the Ex-Servicemen's section Mr. Tom Mundy.

JOHN HAMILTON: Conducted the service at the Cenotaph.

After the service we marched along the Embankment to Temple Place for a short rally. The large group of reporters and photographers who had accompanied the NF during the afternoon's proceedings looked distinctly sheepish when they were told that the organisation that they had 'written off' in recent years had bounced back with two of the best election results they had achieved for many years.

Remembrance Day 1993 saw the National Front maintain its tradition of honouring our war dead, while at the same time ensuring the dignity of the occasion by completely out-manoevering those opponents of the NF who were bent on disrupting the day.

DUDLEY TOAST COUNCIL ELECTION POLL

AS EXPECTED the December meeting of the Dudley Branch of the National Front was a celebration of their superb effort in Princes End Ward council election.

Candidate John Lord was presented with a bottle of malt whisky while the campaign workers enjoyed a delicious buffet courtesy of the branch.

Back to business, the branch drew up plans for a leafletting campaign in Tipton and earmarked four wards to contest in the May Council elections.

A collection at the end of the meeting raised £74.00.

Lady Birdwood Guest Speaker in Birmingham

ON SUNDAY 28th November Birmingham National Front held an enthusiastic and enjoyable branch meeting with the Dowager Lady Birdwood the guest speaker.

A collection of £83.00 was taken and the literature table took £37.00.

Branch Efficiency League

AS THE contest starts for the Branch Efficiency Cup for 1993/94 there will be some changes to make it more competitive. The four biggest branches will form a Premier Division while the other branches form the First Division. There will be trophies for the winner of each section at this year's Annual Conference.

With only two sets of monthly figures in, many of the First Division branches are ahead of the bottom of the Premier Division, however one familiar feature is the renewed rivalry between Home Counties North and Birmingham.

NF CHRISTMAS DINNER

ON FRIDAY 17th December the National Front took over a resturant in Central London for their Christmas Dinner.

At £15.00 a head diners enjoyed a four course meal with a choice for main dish of poached salmon, rib of beef or turkey.

NF Chairman Ian Anderson gave a brief after dinner address reflecting members' feelings of optimism for the Party in 1994.

EUROPEAN ELECTION FUND

WITH A stunning £1,700 coming in during the past six weeks the European Election Fund has soared straight up to £2,964.00 (as at 1st December 1993) giving us real encouragement that we will achieve our target of £8,000.00 and so be able to contest four seats in the European Elections in June.

However we still urgently need to keep the money coming in as we need to reach our target well before the election day in June so that we can pay the deposits and the printing of election leaflets.

Over the next few weeks we will be formally announcing the candidates and the constituencies that we will be fighting in this the biggest election effort the Party has made since 1983. Over 1 million items of literature will be sent out.

Please help us to achieve our target by sending in a donation to: The National Front, P.O.Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

SCOTT INQUIRY FARCE: There Was No Supply of "ARMS TO IRAQ!"

THE FARCICAL Scott Inquiry into what the purple press describes as The Arms to Iraq Scandal continues interminably along its asinine course. If there was a scandal concerning the supply of equipment to Iraq it was the action of the Government in allowing the directors of Matrix-Churchill to be prosecuted merely in order that shifty Government ministers might be able to disclaim responsibility and avoid embarrassment.

For there was no supply of arms to Iraq, merely the sale of machine tools that might have been used in the manufacture of arms - or rolling pins, or refrigerators, or crankshafts, or pots and pans. The notion that our brave lads in the Gulf War were menaced by British-made offensive weapons is ludicrous since there was no recorded instance of our boys being bombarded with lathe chunks and most British casualties came from the 'friendly fire' of trigger-happy Americans.

As for the Iraqis needing 'sophisticated British machine tools' to manufacture their armaments, any competent engineer could manufacture weapons with second hand lathes, milling, drilling, boring and grinding machines that could be picked up cheaply at the bankruptcy sales of engineering companies ruined by this Government's industrial policies - or rather lack of them.

"The notion that our brave lads were menaced by British-made weapons is ludicrous"

Yet we have this parade of deadbeat politicians and civil servants pontificating before the Scott Inquiry about the sales of Arms to Iraq who seem to be totally divorced from reality and wholly ignorant of the most mundane facts of the real economic and industrial life of this country. One must assume this because they have never done a day's productive or, for that matter, honest work in their lives. Setting aside the fact that Iraq was never an enemy of this country until these fools made her so, the notion that Iraq or anyone else is dependent upon Britain for sophisticated machine tools represents a pathetic and dangerous self-delusion.

There was a time indeed when we were one of the kingpins in the manufacture of industrial equipment but those days are long gone and will certainly never be recaptured if we are perceived to be sitting in judgement on the moral fitness of people who buy the things we make.

The only way in which the Scott Inquiry might serve some useful purpose is if these ignorant bletherers were to take the time to tour such British manufacturing plants as are still left. They would discover that these factories use machines made in Germany and Switzerland. They would find machines made in India to Swiss and German designs. But most of all they would see rank after rank of machines made in Japan. They might, just might, find one or two machines that were made in Britain.

Perhaps the Scott Inquiry might then reach a sensible verdict and recommend the directors of Matrix Churchill for the Queen's Award for Export Achievement. They might also thank the Government of Iraq for their generous, if unwise, decision to give us their custom.

Our children's children will live in a grey desert and will never know the beauty that we lost.

Commercial Selfishness and Greed is Killing Off Our Nation's Wildlife Heritage!

POLLUTION, URBAN SPRAWL and chemical 'agri-business' are destroying Britain's ancient wildlife heritage. The extent of this decimation was made clear on November 17th when the Government-funded Institute for Terrestrial Ecology published the results of a 15 year study of the dying of wild Britain.

The ITE Countryside Survey looked at over 1,000 sites across the length and breadth of our islands over the period 1978 to 1990. The Institute has spent the last three years carefully analysing their results. They revealed that in just 12 years the diversity of our woodland life has dropped by 14%. Meadows have 13% fewer species and even moorlands, relatively untouched and far from obvious sources of pollution, have lost 11% of the kinds of living thing which lived on them in 1978.

Species we have lost since the survey started include the mouse-eared bat, the viper's bugloss moth, the red-backed shrike and the meadow wood ant. Since the survey period ended, the beautiful large tortoiseshell butterfly has joined the ranks of the extinct. The last one in Britain perished alone in the frosts of Autumn 1992.

The survey revealed that more than one-fifth of the hedgerows that make our countryside uniquely ours were grubbed up and burned in the 1980's. The Government paid farmers to do it. 95% of Britain's wildflower meadows have been deliberately destroyed by agri-business since the last War. In the same period almost half our ancient woodlands have been chopped down and the trees that remain are now considered to be the unhealthiest in Western Europe.

More wildlife is dying as you read this. Birds such as our owls, woodpeckers and tits are declining. The shadow of extinction seems set to silence the skylark in the daytime sky and the nightingale in the woodland dark. Their joyous rhapsodies have inspired generations of our poets, now our children will never hear them sing. Nor will they delight in the fluttering of bright tiny wings for three-quarters of our 59 resident butterfly species have suffered dramatic reductions since the war and half are now on the endangered list.

Our land is turning into a polluted, pesticide-soaked desert. Whilst the Government does less than nothing - its policies pay the polluters. Meanwhile the EEC Common Agricultural Policy it supports pays the agri-business tycoons who have swept the small farmers from the land to defile and rape the living earth ever more to produce mountains and lakes of chemical-soaked stodge nobody wants to eat or drink.

Environmentalists are enraged. Tony Juniper of Friends of the Earth protested that . . .

"Far from maintaining bio-diversity, we are turning our countryside into a homogenous landscape populated by dandelions and starlings".

Sir Edward Greenwell, Chairman of the Country Landowners Association Environment Committee, pointed out that Government tax changes had removed the incentive for landowners to manage woodlands, leaving them prey at best to neglect, at worst to destruction. Even the Government's own statutory body, English Nature, has been moved to protest by the ITE Countryside Survey findings. Dr Iam McLean, its head of species conservation, himself said,

"Thirty years ago, pastures were more flowery and there were brighter colours in spring and summer. Now they are all green and people think it is normal".

Environmental campaigner Jonathon Porritt pointed out that nature is as much part of our nation's heritage as the works of our forefathers and asked people to imagine the uproar if developers had tried to lay waste a similar proportion of our cathedrals, churches and historic houses!

Our wildlife is part of our nation's heritage and we are well on the way to losing it forever. If greed and short-sighted commercial selfishness keeps on killing it off at the rate - about 10% a decade - this survey reveals then in less than 100 years there will be absolutely none left. Our children's children will live in a land where no trees grow, save in the grim dank arrays of commercial conifer plantations. Where no flowers bloom, save the ugly alien Common Market-funded yellow acres of oilseed rape. Where no birds sing save for foreign ones in cages. They will live in a grey desert and will never know the beauty that we lost.

Selfish greed is killing the life of our land and no one can expect the voice of selfish greed, the Conservative Government, to do anything about it. But the Labour Party and the Liberal Democrats will do nothing either for they are both even more committed to the Common Market which funds the multi-national agri-business devastation. Only the National Front can save our wildlife and countryside. For, as our 1988 Introduction to the National Front policy statement put it . . .

"We are the wardens of the living land. Its survival, and the welfare of the complex web of life of which we are part, is essential to our own. Thus in preserving the life of the land we preserve the life of the Nation and the Race . . . Therefore the defence of the environment is central to our programme for national and racial survival."

The National Front's 1992 Election Manifesto was entitled Caring for Britain and that meant caring for the wildife as well as the people. They, like us, are native to this land. They too have a right to live here. The NF Manifesto for the 1983 General Election was called Let Britain Live. These latest findings of the Institute for Terrestrial Ecology show that the other parties' alternative is to let Britain die . . .

Britain To Lose Power of Veto

SO MUCH for John Major's 'Power of Veto' in the Council of Ministers, the law-making body of the European Community.

An amendment put forward by Belgian prime minister Jean-Luc Dehaene at the Common Market summit in December proposed that EC decisions be passed by a 'Qualified Majority Vote'.

This would reduce Britain's power to say 'No' in almost all Brussels meetings and would mean Government policy passed in Westminster could be overturned in Brussels.

Staying in the European Community means surrendering British Sovereignty. This is unacceptable and why the National Front says 'Get Britain Out'.

JAPAN PLANNED GERM WARFARE!

JAPAN PLANNED to target germ weapons against British soldiers in wide areas of Asia and the Pacific during the Second World War.

Documents of the Japanese Imperial Army staff uncovered recently showed they planned to use some ten tons of germ weapons against British soldiers in the Philippines, Australia, India and other countries just before their surrender in 1945.

Isn't it amazing we're such good friends today and we allow them to set up their factories in Britain making use of our workforce for the benefit of Japan and the Japanese people.

JOHN SMITH: He faces opposition to his plan of ethnic quotas

Labour Grassroots Revolt at Imposition of Candidates

THE LABOUR Party is in turmoil as their constituency parties fight a rearguard action against the implementation of quotas in the selection of women and ethnic minority candidates for the General Election.

The Labour Party have earmarked 30 safe seats for ethnic minority candidates and 71 safe seats for women candidates but the constituencies concerned have given the 'quota system' the thumbs down calling the scheme 'political correctness gone mad'.

The chairman of a Glasgow constituency party attacked the positive discrimination in favour of women as . . .

"Creating jobs for women who do not have the ability to pass the normal selection procedures. It is middle class women trying to create jobs for middle class women".

The positive discrimination in favour of ethnic minority candidates has also run into trouble. An all ethnic minority short-list looks doomed to failure because the Race Relations Act would make the prevention of White candidates illegal. Labour's General Secretary, Larry Whittle favours giving ethnic minority candidates an automatic place on the short-list when nominated but local constituenies say they would scupper this plan.

The chairman of an East London constituency party made no bones about it . . .

"Putting up a candidate from the ethnic minorities in our area would be handing votes to the opposition. Our selection committee would leave no stone unturned to ensure this didn't happen."

At present five of Labour's 271 MPs are from the ethnic minorities.

MAJOR CLAIMS GREAT VICTORY IN EUROPE

JOHN MAJOR is claiming a great victory within the European Community in his drive to reduce interference from Brussels in Britain's affairs.

He has bravely fought Britain's corner against other European countries and has won a heroic battle in winning permission for the United Kingdom to stand apart from Europe.

Yes our Prime Minister has forced our European partners to agree to allow Britain's beaches to stay polluted and Britain's drinking water to stay below the recommended purity levels.

This historic success will mean that privatised water companies can continue to make vast profits for their fat cat friends in the City, pay their chief executives huge salaries and slow down on the timetable to upgrade Britain's drinking and bathing water.

Smithfield Fights to Keep Tradition

THE CATTLE market at Smithfield was established in 1638 but now its days are numbered because of new EC regulations.

Brussels has decreed that by the end of 1995 the sawdust-covered floors and hollering bummarees must give way to electronic trolleys and robot doors, while refrigerated lorries will lock on to docking bays and deliver meat without contact with the outside world.

Two thousand jobs will be put at risk and many traders will go to the wall unable to meet the cost of the modernisation which will put rents, rates and service charges up 500%.

The porters defend the Victorian system used in Smithfield and argue that it is an important part of British heritage that has served the country well. They say that their methods are hygienic and that modernisation is not always for the best. They cite the case where cutters were told to change their wood boards for plastic ones. Then they were told to change back after it was found that the plastic boards harboured germs. Germs don't multiply on wood!.

The meddling in the affairs of Smithfield Meat Market by European bureaucrats is just another reason why Britain should get out of Common Market.

IMMIGRANTS WHO RETURN HOME FIND CULTURAL FULFILMENT

AFTER BLACK Labour MP Bernie Grant broke the taboo and said the Government should pay his people to go back to the West Indies, more and more people are now speaking out in a similar vein. They are confirming what the NF has long said, that many Blacks in Britain want to go back to where their people came from, and all of them would be better off doing it.

One such advocate of repatriation spoke out in the Sunday Times on 21st November. Loanna Morrison enthused about her first visit to her Jamaican homeland, 25 years after she left it for England as a baby.

"Once there", she said, "I didn't want to come back".

"It's a nice place. The climate is fantastic making your hair softer and your skin come alive. The water is pure. Fruits are to be had in abundance. Local food is excellent and cheap. Social life is buoyant in Jamaica, and there's plenty of night-life."

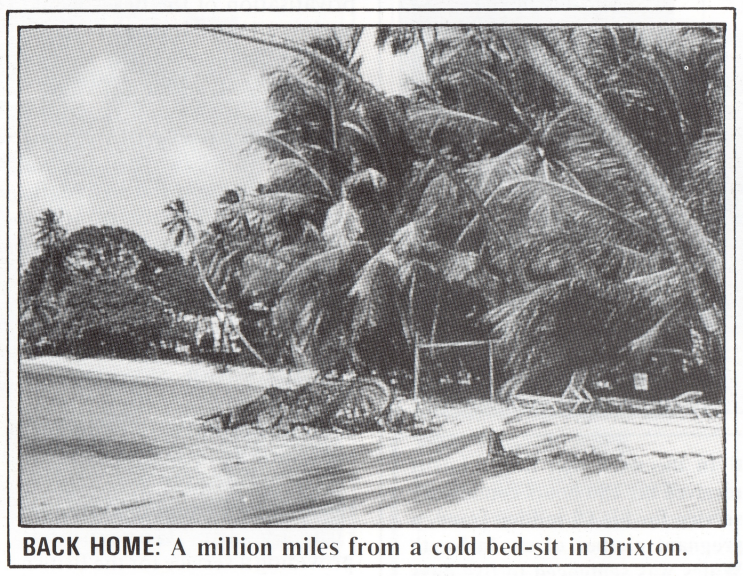
Loanna Morrison reported that there were plenty of jobs for Blacks returning there too. Unemployment, at 7%, is lower than in Britain and nurses, teachers, builders and technology experts are all in demand. A British-born West Indian girl she met out there had thought that Jamaica would be poverty-stricken and crime-ridden but that wasn't the case. She found a job straight-away and had no desire to experience a cold bed-sit in Brixton ever again.

Loanna found the schools excellent and a quality of life exceeding her expectations with the added bonus of a super climate which meant heating bills and a winter wardrobe were things of the past.

Moreover, Blacks from Britain are welcome back, contrary to stories circulated by multi-racialist fanatics amongst immigrant communities over here.

"Now I have been back myself", continued Loanna, "I no longer adhere to the old arguments about those returning not being accepted; Second generation Blacks born in Britain will not find in Jamaica an alien culture but will find there cultural fulfilment. It's their home".

Loanna Morrison would have no worries taking her family back to Jamaica. "They would love it and have a real future to look forward to. It's a much healthier life".



BACK HOME: A million miles from a cold bed-sit in Brixton.

But crucially, there would be no conflict of identity and resentment from an indigenous population. There would be no fretting about whether to behave like a Black person or a White person, no worries about discrimination.

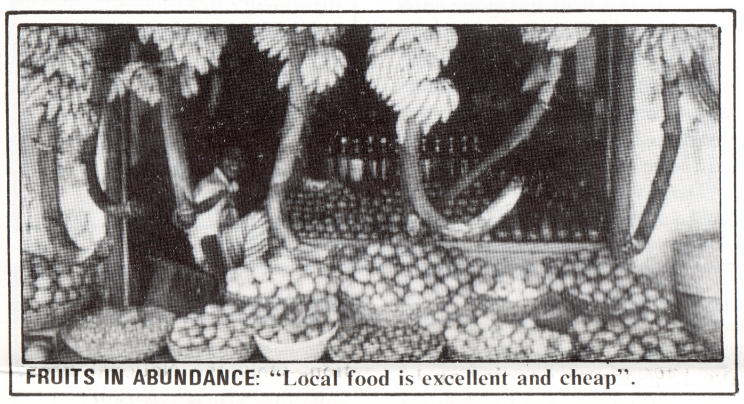
"Jamaica's assets", concluded this returned immigrant, "far outstrip its disadvantages. There are plenty of others like me. The Jinglish, Jacadians and Jamericans (the terms for a returning English, Canadian or American Jamaican) are going back in their thousands.

Good luck to them! They won't regret it. Nor would millions more who would go back to where they came from too if they could afford it.

The National Front would help them afford it by paying their fare and helping them financially until they can get back on their feet once back home. As the 1992 National Front General Election Manifesto put it "initially a National Front Government would provide a number of economic incentives for coloured immigrants to leave Britain and return to their ethnic homeland. We believe that a very large proportion of the immigrant population would avail themselves of such an opportunity".

Since Bernie Grant broke the barrier on admitting it and more immigrants have spoken out, it has become quite clear that the National Front is right in the policies it promotes on immigration and repatriation. The only people who oppose such a policy are the multi-racialists in power who brought immigrants here to use as cheap labour - 20th century slaves.

Immigrants and indigenous Britons together can get them out of Government by voting for the National Front. A National Front Government would give both communities a brighter future, free of strife and racism, each in their own home countries.



FRUITS IN ABUNDANCE: "Local food is excellent and cheap".

BERNIE RECRUITS FOR THE FRONT!

BERNIE GRANT, Labour MP for Tottenham, is proving to be a superb recruiting officer for the National Front. Every time he makes a speech these days he's either advocating National Front policy or angering the British public so much that they rush to join the National Front.

In the last two months Bernie has . . .

* Acknowledged that Black people living in Britain are not 'just as British' as the rest of us by suggesting that they should be given financial assistance to return to their land of ethnic origin. It is a suggestion taken right out of the pages of the National Front Manifesto Caring for Britain.
* During a national speaking tour Mr Grant told an audience in Birmingham that Blacks should be paid compensation for slavery: "We must demand compensation for the biggest crime in history, the colonisation and enslavement of our people. We want an acknowledgement and apology for the enslavement from the very top - the British Government and the Queen as Head of State. Black people are still suffering mentally and physically from slavery".
* In December Bernie Grant upset the establishment again by demanding the return of the Crown Jewels to Africa, claiming that many of the stones in them were mined in Africa.

BERNIE GRANT: His high media profile helps the NF.

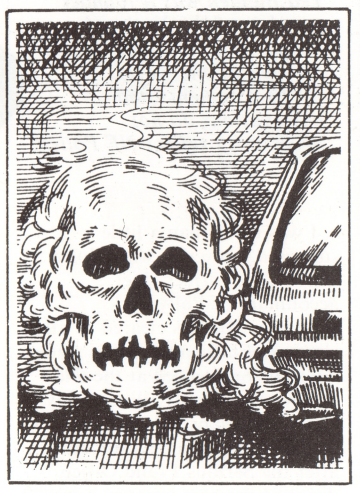
Of course such controversial speeches give Bernie Grant a very high media profile with extensive newspaper reports of his speaking tour. His comments angered and worried many people who contacted the National Front to voice their concern. The overwhelming view of these people was that Bernie Grant should follow his own advice and return to his country of ethnic origin.

Rail Privatisation Will Make People Take the Pain

THE PRIVATISATION and the cutting of subsidies to British Rail threatens the lives of many British people.

A three year survey conducted at Lancaster University has revealed that car exhaust fumes threaten the health of the nation. Yet the Government sell-off of BR will mean dramatically increased fares forcing more cars on to the roads.

A Transport 2000 survey reveals that Government plans for the railways will mean 28% more cars on London streets increasing dangerous exhaust fumes which produce more carbon dioxide.



Dangerous Toxins Dumped in Britain!

ENGLAND AND Wales are the dumping grounds for the world's unwanted poisons according to research by HM Inspectorate of Pollution.

Forty-five countries dumped 45,307 tons of dangerous toxins in England and Wales in 1993. Manchester was the toxic waste capital of Britain receiving a frightening 15,689 tons of hazardous waste from abroad, more than one-third of the total import.

Defended by Mercenary Forces

ROYAL AIR Force manpower is being depleted to such an extent that it is now dependent on outside contractors to survive.

Catering, elementary flying training and some aircraft maintenance have been contracted out and a commitment to extend this process is part of the Ministry of Defence's arrangement with the Treasury.

The 1990 Options for Change review proposed reducing RAF manpower by 15,000 in five years. This figure has now been increased to 20,000

The defence of Britain could be left in the hands of mercenary forces based on the lowest cost bid if the Government's market-testing policy for the armed services is taken to its conclusion.

When Music Encourages Murder!

THE INNER cities of America are the most dangerous place to live for the country's Black population.

Three Black children are killed by gunfire every day and not since the days of slavery has this beleagured population faced such genocide.

Essence a leading magazine for Blacks reported that inner city streets had long been mean but never so lethal. A sense of powerlessness and fear was gripping Blacks as "our children have become the enemy and it's our sons and daughters who are killing one another".

In the past Black gangs have battled for supremacy in such areas for the lucrative drugs and prostitution trades. But now there is a new wave of violence promoted through rap music called Gangsta Music.

Its lyrics glory in murder, violence and the mis-treatment of women. Its singers are men who have committed murder. Calvin Broadus is charged with first degree murder. His biggest hit is 187, the police code for a murder. The song is about a 12-bore shotgun aimed at a man's neck.

Tupac Shakur received a gold disc for his best-selling song Strictly for my Niggaz. Its revolting lyrics described women as disposable playthings. He is in prison for shooting two policemen and faces additional charges of sodomy, attempted sodomy, sexual abuse and possession of a gun.

Gangsta Music is the biggest threat faced by the Black population in America according to Jessie Jackson.

"Songs that call our women bitches and our people niggers should be banned" he said.

But there is no likelihood of Gangsta Music being banned. The recordings are not just bought by a tiny cult, the music is big business and enjoyed by the whole Black population. Despite being in prison, Calvin Broadus released a CD at the beginning of December with lyrics such as "I treat a bitch like a 7-Up".

JESSE JACKSON: Wants a ban

It has become one of the fastest selling recordings in music history.

'Doing the Right Thing'

WHEN THE VOTERS give their verdict at the next General Election, John Major and his Government will be dispatched to the history books. Little is certain in politics but the removal from power of the Conservatives is one event that surely must be.

Well, how will the man, John Major (his real name is John Ball), be remembered? History will record that he came to power through the undignified removal of his predecessor. Margaret Thatcher, who had led the Tories to three General Election victories, was unceremoniously dumped mid-term in a fashion that made even her political opponents feel uneasy.

His supporters will claim that his greatest achievement was to win the 1991 General Election for the Tories, although that is questionable. True the Tories snatched victory from the jaws of defeat but that was due more to Neil Kinnock and his antics at the Sheffield rally, than anything the Conservative leader did.

John Major will be remembered for undermining the stature of Government. Up until the demise of Margaret Thatcher there was a set of standards that politicians adhered to. A code of conduct that gave moral authority to Westminster.

But during John Major's term of office this has completely disappeared. The sensibility for 'Doing the right thing' is something all politicians should acquire on entering Parliament.

Everyone makes mistakes in life, especially politicians, and 'doing the right thing' ensures that an honourable member acts quickly when any error of judgement is exposed so that he does not taint the House in any way. In other words it means resigning if your actions or behaviour discredits Parliament.

Under John Major that code of conduct has gone by the board. Mellor and Mates should have resigned as MP's. Brooke and Mayhew should have resigned as Ministers and Major himself should have resigned the leadership over his initial defeat on Maastricht.

It didn't happen. Discredited men clung on to their positions of power like drowning men to a life-raft. They ignored the code of conduct and as such have lowered the stature of the House in the eyes of the British people.

Stiff Upper Lip

AN ACCIDENT on the M40 motorway in November resulted in the tragic death of thirteen schoolchildren. Their minibus ploughed into the back of a motorway maintenance vehicle in adverse weather conditions.

The grief suffered by relatives as they were told of the tragedy was accentuated by the media coverage of the crash. At a time when numb and distressed parents and relatives needed strength and resolve to come through the trauma they had to face the media circus that homed-in on the grief-stricken school.

At such a time parents needed information, comfort and privacy. Unfortunately they didn't get it.

Headmaster Paul Hill fell victim to the media circus. He should have been the solid rock that provided comfort, strength and reassurance. He should have been the shoulder for his parents to cry on. He should have set the example for his staff and other parents to follow to make the grief bearable for those who had lost loved ones. The last thing he should have been doing was weeping uncontrollably in front of reporters and cameramen.

In days gone by there was something called the 'Stiff Upper Lip'. It was where you coped with all the worst life could throw at you with fortitude and dignity and hopefully acted as an example for others to follow.

Today what is needed is a few brave individuals showing a 'Stiff Upper Lip' in the face of adversity. This would soon end the media's intrusion into personal grief.

Over the last four months the circulation of The FLAG has increased substantially. The paper is now beginning to reach a much wider readership and to meet the challenge of winning minds and influencing people the content of the paper has to be dramatically improved.

While the parameters of the paper will stay the same The FLAG needs to provide much more information on specialised subjects within political issues that support National Front policy. The Environment, Industry and Local Government are areas where specialised contributions would be welcome.

THE TORY PARTY LOOKS AFTER THEIR FRIENDS IN THE CITY!

THE TORY Party certainly look after their friends in the City.

Financial adviser Roger Levitt defrauded investors of £9 million pounds. He was described in Court as "thoroughly and markedly dishonest" yet for his crime he was given 180 hours community service by Mr Justice Laws.

Another financier, Terry Ramsden, walked free from court after receiving a two year suspended sentence after admitting a £90 million fraud.

Levitt and Ramsden should have faced prison sentences of a minimum of seven years but in Tory Britain the defrauding of British people by criminals in the City is an accepted way of life.

In the City of London fortunes can be made and lost, legally and illegally, by shifting money around the money markets. Businesses are bought and sold like so many pounds of carrots and yet the City creates no real wealth, it acts like a parasite on the real producers of wealth. The National Front would put an end to this charade at a stroke by closing down the Stock Exchange.

■ In the week that Roger Levitt received his 180 hours community service for his £9 million fraud, a pregnant mother of six in South Wales was sentenced to five days in prison for failing to pay a £55 fine for not having a TV licence.

Sickening, isn't it?

BATTLE OF THE BUSES LIFTS THE CURTAIN ON PRIVATISATION FARCE!

THE TORIES told us that the privatisation of the buses would lead to a better and safer service for the public. What a load of nonsense!

In Manchester and Liverpool the lives of passengers are being put at risk as two private bus companies slug it out like Mafia gangs to win control of of the roads of the two cities.

Drivers have been hurt, buses have collided, windows have been smashed, and bomb threats have been made as Manchester's GM Buses battles for routes in Liverpool and Merseyside Transport Limited fights for services in Manchester.

The National Front believes that public transport should be run by the Government providing a service for the British people not a profit for entrepreneurs and investors.

Under Fives Lose Out as Government is Forced to Find Funds for Translators!

MONEY FROM the Government's Education budget that should be going to provide nursery education for children of three years upwards is being used to try to cope with the language problems posed by the children of Britain's growing ethnic minority population in our inner cities.

Many schools, where classes are predominantly of Asian pupils, have to employ translators to come in to work side by side with teachers to help the children learn English. As well as holding back the British children in the class such an exercise is very expensive and the cost has to be met from the education budget.

Nursery education suffers as a consequence. Britain laggs behind the rest of Europe with only 46% of three to five year-olds enjoying a publicly-funded education. In France and Belgium it's 95%, in Denmark and Italy 84% and in Germany 77%.

Nursery education is vital in shaping the minds and lives of Britain's youngsters. The National Front believes that schooling for three to five year-olds should be available to all but not forced on all. Parents able to spend time with their children can prove just as advantageous.

LAST PIT CLOSES IN DURHAM

CHEAP FOREIGN coal imports claimed the last pit in Durham in December when the Wearmouth Colliery in Sunderland closed with the loss of 670 jobs.

The Durham coalfield once employed over 186,000 miners and today there are still vast amounts of good quality coal ready to be mined.

A National Front Government would ban foreign coal from entering Britain and ensure a future for the British coal industry.

100 YEARS OF WEAVING AND TIE-MAKING COMES TO AN END

FOREIGN IMPORTS have killed off the oldest family textile firm in Macclesfield with the loss of 36 jobs.

Silk weaver and tie-maker James Arnold once employed over 300 weavers, designers, card cutters and sewing machinists but now the firm has gone into voluntary liquidation.

Cheap textile imports from the Far East, produced in sweat-shop conditions, have flooded the British market and destroyed our once proud textile industry.

The National Front would ban such imports from coming into Britain and ensure through investment and training that firms like James Arnold, weavers for over 100 years, can once again supply the textile needs of the British people.

WORDS OF WISDOM

"Four things belong to a judge: to hear courteously, to answer wisely, to consider soberly and to decide impartially".

Socrates, 470-399 B.C.
Philosopher & Teacher.

The Vital Statistic

WE'VE ALWAYS been so proud of our judiciary, haven't we? There was never any question of them being under the thumb of politicians was there? They seemed to exist on a different plane to the rest of us.

So impartial were they, so resistant to special pleading, so Olympian in their detachment. Why, when they asked some idiotic question such as "Who is Marilyn Monroe?" or "What is jazz?", we would smile and congratulate ourselves on having judges who were so aloof from our world of venality and corruption. They were unworldly, indeed other-worldly.

Ah, those were the days but no more. For our Government has decided that impartial judges are exceedingly inconvenient. They are embarrassed by the fact that the population of our prisons is largely composed of racial minorities - as the weaselly phrase has it, "out of all proportion to their numbers in the community".

Such an imbalance is exceedingly unwelcome to a Government as committed to multi-racialism as ours is and so willing to conceal the facts. One obvious way to redress the balance is to ensure that more Whites go to jail and our oily Home Secretary, Michael Howard, has already set this process in motion by planning to make race relations legislation even more draconian and oppressive.

The other is to deter judges from sending Blacks to jail, no matter what their crimes, by giving them a gentle hint that their own career prospects might be blighted if they do.

So the Government, through the Lord Chancellor, Lord Mackay of Clashfern (how proud they must be of him in Clashfern), has ordered a new project to train all judges in racial awareness and minority issues such as racial discrimination. Judges will not actually be ordered to go easy on Blacks - but they would have to be exceptionally slow not to get the message from the Government.

The Metropolitan Police Authority made it plain some years ago that any copper who was not politically correct on the race issue would have no prospect of promotion and would, indeed, be lucky to keep his job. Nevertheless, a great many people were amazed when Paul Condon was appointed Metropolitan Police Commissioner. During his time as Chief Constable of Kent, his force had the worst record in the country of cautioning criminals instead of prosecuting them - over 50% in fact, some of whom had up to a dozen cautions. There was also a small matter of the Kent police falsifying criminal records by inducing convicted criminals to confess to crimes they hadn't committed, thus clearing up the files in a most impressive manner.

One must therefore assume that Mr Condon must have had many other talents to justify his promotion apart, that is, from his outstanding political correctness on the race issue though that, of course, is one vital statistic.

But what is the point of a politically correct police force if the judges simply don't know what political correctness is? From now on they will. And from now on any lawyer who aspires to be a judge will know that, whatever his other qualifications may be, his prospects are nil without that vital statistic.

It's Hard Cheese on us!

YOU'VE ALL heard of Asil Nadir of course. He was the founder of the Polly Peck company who fled the country to avoid being tried on fraud charges - indeed some might say that he was officially encouraged to do so.

There was a time however when Nadir, a Turkish Cypriot, was definitely flavour of the month with everyone who was something in the City. Why he could do no wrong. He could pluck vast profits out of thin air. City gents trampled each other underfoot in the stampede to buy shares in his company as though he had found a way of transmuting base metals into gold or had discovered the secret of perpetual motion.

Then the bubble burst. I feel sorry when people who are driven by naked greed are taken for a ride by a con-man. What a shame that they should lose their shirts. I'm all broken up.

The Ted Budden Column

Ted Budden was a founder member of the National Front. In his column he gives his view of the world.

His comments ahd observations do not necessarily reflect NF Policy.

I was more than a little surprised, however, when John Turner, the former chief accountant of Polly Peck International, was cleared of all charges of false accounting when his trial commenced at the Old Bailey just recently. When I say cleared, perhaps I should explain that he was presumed innocent after the Serious Fraud Office dropped the case because it would be 'unjust' to proceed against him since his boss, Asil Nadir, had fled the country and could not be brought to trial.

Now we all know that British justice is totally impartial, is wholly immune from political pressure, and is the envy of the world - just like our police. I mean, we know that because the lawyers and the police keep telling us so and I believe them; just as I am prepared to believe that John Turner is innocent and that his conscience is as pure as the driven snow.

I am, though, just a little mystified as to the reason for his acquittal. 'Unjust' because his alleged confederate was absent? Good grief; on such grounds half the criminals brought before the courts would be aquitted including the Great Train Robbers! And what of Burke and Hare, the Irish body-snatchers who supplied corpses for medical dissection and topped up the supply by murdering a few people on the side? I suppose that if Hare had fled the country, Burke would have been discharged without a stain on his chararcter.

I know that it is utterly contemptible to cast aspertions on the spotless honour and inspirational rectitude of our Government mininsters - who are, of course, the envy of the world - but I cannot dispel the niggling feeling that Mr. Turner's acquittal had somewhat less to do with the eternal quest for justice than the Tory Party's desperate desire to avoid the embarrassing disclosures and unwelcome publicity that a trial might have involved.

For Mr Nadir was a contributor of massive funds to his fellow entrepreneurs, or twisters as the case maybe, in the Tory Party. This is only natural since nadir in English means the lowest depths and the Tory Party is undoubtedly the pits. Thus the Tory Party is under suspicion of profiting from Mr Nadir's allegedly shifty operations - the misbegotten gaining from the ill-gotten as it were. It was this fact that the Labour Party tried to exploit during a Commons debate on Tory funding, only to be hoisted with their own petard when it was revealed that Labour Party funds had also been boosted by massive contributions from a mysterious businessmen equally as foreign and allegedly equally dodgy. Honours - or dishonours - even. Both parties have, of course, sworn to hand back the money if it was dishonestly gained but so far neither has found it necessary.

"This is only natural since nadir in English means the lowest depths and the Tory Party is undoubtedly the pits"

But the most revealling aspect of the 'debate' was John Major's (nee Ball's) insistence that most Tory Party cash came from the proceeds of cheese and wine parties, something we are obliged to believe since little John is a man of stainless honour and the envy of the world. This explains a lot.

There was a time when the National Front tried to emulate the Tories by raising funds through cheese and wine parties. I attended many of these at great cost to my pocket and even greater cost to my health. I still recall the ravages wrought by those gallons of cheap plonk (Chateau Sarsons, I think). Even more stark is the memory of some particularly villainous South African sherry bought, I am sure, as a mark of our solidarity with South Africa but which cost ten bob a crate and was probably supplied by the ANC or some other enemy of the NF. Certainly it put me out of action for a week and left me a shadow of my former self (which some considered to be an improvement).

So have a little pity for all those poor Tory M.P.s who are forced to attend the millions of cheese and wine parties that would be required to raise the amount of money it takes to run the Tory machine. Poor devils; perhaps this is the reason they are what they are; why Government policies are so cheesy, and why the Government seems to be run by inebriated newts who make Brahms and Liszt seem like founders of the Temperance Movement.

The Neutering Game

I SEE that Plymouth Council, after a debate of truly monumental asininity, have decided to outlaw the title 'Manager' on the grounds that it is sexist.

As the satirical columnist Peter Simple once observed, such people are so innately ridiculous that it is impossible to lampoon them since the very best efforts of a satirist could never be half as funny as the reality.

In fact, since the title 'Manager' is entirely neutral and equally as applicable to female as male, these politically correct morons have been really wasting their valuable debating time but we may well be sure that this will in no way deflect them for their mission to neuter the English language as a prelude to neutering the English nation. One may well ask just what sort of weirdos sit on town councils these days but, alas, this begs the question, what sort of people elect them in the first place?

But of course Plymouth Council does not have a monopoly on freaks. We recently had the National Association of Probation Officers spurning Eastbourne as a potential venue for their conference after a child was heard to make a 'racist remark' in a playground.

What future then can Brighton have as a conference centre when trade union organisations hear the shocking revelations in a recent copy of the Brighton Evening Argus. This horror report concerned the suspension of two children from a Brighton Playgroup after they were reported to the playgroup leader for saying to a boy of mixed race, "You are made of chocolate. Your mummy got you from a sweet shop".

These truly horrifying words, which were highlighted in a report by the Ethnic Minorities Representative Council and the Inter-Agency Forum on Racial Harassment, caused Ms Jane Babb, Council Community Play Officer to state, "There is no way we could have avoided taking action on this or would have wanted to".

The Editor of the Evening Argus is one Chris Fowler who apparently believes himself to be a crusading journalist but who is well known for his fond regard for, and collusion with the Socialist Workers Party and far Left loony fringe.

In a portentous footnote to the report, this Fowler person justifies reporting these frightful racialist expressions by saying, "We are publishing these taunts because they illustrate the serious nature of the abuse".

Since, a la Peter Simple, it is impossible to satirise this living lampoon, what can one say to this Fowler person? Perhaps, "Your mummy must have got you free from a riding stable. You're horse manure!"

EURO-ELECTIONS: Those opposed to a Federal Europe Must Vote NF!

WITH JUNE'S European elections beginning to loom on the horizon it is nice to know that even in the upper echelons of the Tory Party there are people who, if they are true to their views on Europe, might end up having to vote National Front.

In a letter to The Times, Lord Tebbit pointed out that by hitching itself to the European People's Party, the Tories have committed themselves to a Federal Europe. Lord Tebbit wrote . . .

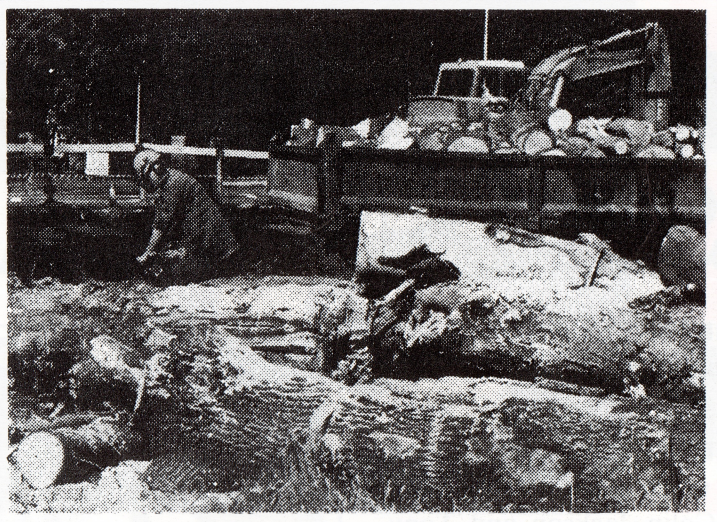
"The programme of the European Peoples' Party is unashamedly federalist. In the words of that Party's manifesto . . .

Para.202: A Federal Europe is now more than ever a necessary and realistic practical objective;

Para.203: The European Peoples' Party considers that only the construction of the European Federal Union can guarantee unity . . . "

So when the Tories tell us that they believe in maintaining Britain's independence we can believe them just as much as we believe them when they tell us that they don't talk to the IRA. We don't believe them, at all.

TEBBIT: If he is true to his views he must vote NF.



"So; we're going to plant some more", says a Sainsbury's spokesman!!

Super Store Puts Cheadle's Heritage Under the Axe

TWENTY-FIVE huge old chestnut trees, a real part of the heritage of Bruntwood Park in Cheadle, Lancashire, have been cut down to make way for an access road to a Sainsbury's Supermarket.

The local council waived a preservation order on the trees as part of the planning agreement for the 350,000 sq ft development.

Answering critics who described the felling of the horse chestnuts as 'tree vandalism' a spokesman for the Superstore said, "During the construction programme many replacement trees will be planted". The spokesman just shrugged his shoulders when it was pointed out that planting new trees could not replace the horse chestnuts that had shaped the way the area had looked for for the last 300 years and were an important part of Cheadle's heritage.

Don't Let our Children be Led Astray.

THE FAMILY Policy Studies Centre has produced figures showing that the number of weddings taking place in Britain is at the lowest level since the Second World War. The report also reveals that nearly half of these marriages end in separation and divorce.

As if to applaud these findings the Daily Express heralded the report under the headline "Marriage is out of Date", which no doubt gave great heart to Britain's growing band of social anarchists.

The real losers are of course the children. With no proper care and supervision they drift through school and into drugs and crime, often ending up in a juvenile relationship resulting in another unwanted baby. Even if they do not succumb to this they are unlikely to receive the financial and long-term support required to train for a professional career.

The demise of the sanctity of marriage and the threat to family life that this poses has been aided by television and the kind of films and propaganda it has peddled since the late Sixties. Programme makers claimed they were merely reflecting people's behaviour of the day but in fact few behaved in that way and many programmes were just an excuse to put forward anti-social views.

Today, while much damage has already been done by the media, we can still stem the flow of this anti-family propaganda by scrutinising programmes carefully and complaining vigorously when they appear. We must take an interest in the material our children are watching and reading to make sure that they are not being led astray.

Tories Surrender the Moral Highground

THE TORY Government, who consistently claim to occupy the moral highground into today's political arena look set to push through legislation that will finally end the position of Sunday as a day of rest during the week.

The new bill to reform the 1950's Shops Act will benefit the Superstores - many of whose owners donate large sums to the Conservative Party - and this is the reason why the Tories are pushing it through.

Sunday trading will not increase the total amount of shopping done. The big store owners benefit because extending their opening hours means they can employ more staff on limited hours and basic pay. It reduces the hours worked and the money earned by staff because overtime at double rate is done away with. In this way the store owners increase their profits by reducing the wage bill.

They Don't Hear

I HAVE been out of work for 12 months now after working for all of my life. My dole money is very poor when I see what other people get - people who don't come from Britain.

All the money we spend abroad instead of looking after our own people is wrong. Many of the policies that your Party put forward are what many working class people need. Today's MPs who run the country don't seem to hear or care. Hopefully this might soon change. The National Front has my support.

Disgusted!

AS A domiciled Scot living in London and late of the 14th Army, I was disgusted to learn that Nelson Mandela was given the freedom of Glasgow. I am sure no decent Scotsman would approve of such utter nonsense.

Shame on him who organised numerous murders of schoolchildren through the bombing of school buses and he fully deserved the 25 year prison sentence he received.

It is deplorable that he, together with President De Clerk, should be awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Since their 'partnership', 11,000 lives have been lost.

It's Laughable

THE REPUBLIC of Ireland's expansionist desire to take over Ulster is laughable.

They can't even look after their present population let alone absorb any more. Irish people leave the Republic in their droves every year to get away from a bankrupt existence that holds out no future for them.

The British people of Northern Ireland have no desire to be part of a 'united' Ireland. No doubt many remember the last war when the lights of Dublin guided German bombers so they could drop their deadly cargo on Belfast.

Before the Tory Government stabs Ulster in the back ministers should remember the words of Winston Churchill.

"But for the loyalty of Northern Ireland the light which now shines so strongly throughout the world would have been extinguished".

The National Front is right to stand by the Loyalists.

RACIAL AWARENESS TRAINING FOR OUR JUDICIARY

£1,000,000 of taxpayers money is to be wasted on a project to train Britain's judges in racial awareness.

Every circuit judge, recorder and assistant recorder will have to attend seminars lasting one and a half days to listen to ethnic minority consultants from Britain's bloated Race Relations Commission instruct them on issues such as discrimination.

Our children don't have enough schoolbooks, our hospitals don't have enough beds and our pensioners live in the cold for fear of huge heating bills. Yet this government sees fit to squander £1,000,000 on educating the most intelligent men and women in the land on the niceties required for our multi-racial society.

Such a waste of money is a crime against the British people at a time when the Government is squeezing every last penny out of our poor and needy.

MULTI-RACIAL SPORT JUST ISN'T FAIR!

MANY SPORTS IN Britain and around the world are dominated by Negroes out of all proportion to their numbers in a way that would bring howls of "anti-racist" outrage if it was any other area of human activity and the dominators were White.

Look at Linford Christie, Colin Jackson and Tony Jarrett in athletics, Frank Bruno and Lennox Lewis in boxing, and all the other Black sports stars - Eubank, Fashanu, Barnes, Akabusi, Ian Wight etc . . .

The figures back up this impression. According to census figures in 1991 Blacks made up 597,000, just over 1%, of the population living in Britain. Yet they make up 40% of Britain's athletic squad. 25% of Football League players are Blacks and they make up 45% of England's World Cup team. In America, Blacks, 13% of the population, totally dominate track and field events and basketball. In boxing and athletics, many 'international' competitions are simply contests between Blacks performing under the flags of various White nations.

What is going on? Why are Blacks so over-represented in some sports? Could it be something in their genes?

That was the politically incorrect question Peter Victor, himself Black, dared to voice in the Sunday Times recently. Ten years ago suggestions that Blacks were naturally better at some sports were just about allowed -

FOOTBALL: Blacks are successful

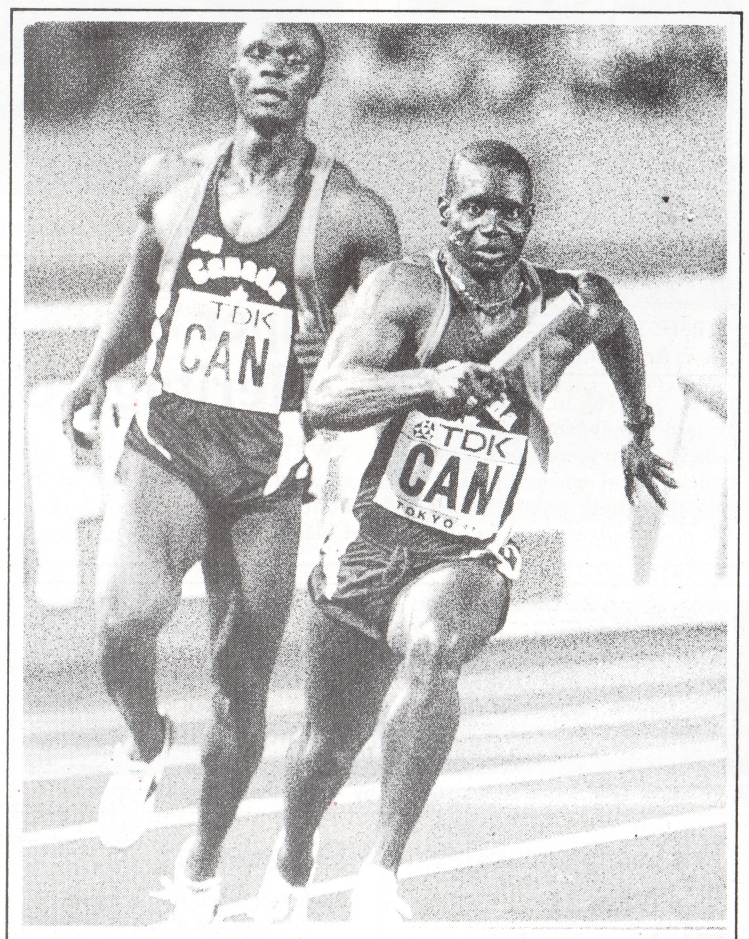
Black athletics coach John Isaacs talked of 'natural ability', Terry Lawless, Bruno's manager, spoke of the 'natural fluidity' of Black boxers, whilst Coventry City's Gary Thompson said Blacks were "the most athletically gifted race". But since then the taboo has come down. In 1988 American football commentator Jim 'the Greek' Snyder said,

"The Black is a better athlete to begin with because he's bred that way". Within hours of his comments he had been sacked from his £750,000 a year job with CBS Television.

Nevertheless Mr Victor dared to point out that 'physiologists agree that Afro-Caribbean and American Black people have a tendency to athleticism. They have denser bones than other races, making them less prone to injury. They tend to have less fatty tissue and greater muscularity'.

"Blacks are inherently likely to dominate sports such as boxing"

Mr Victor was brave to voice this taboo question. But it has consequences for sport which he did not go into. For if races differ in inherited potential for sporting ability it makes multi-racial sport as unfair as entering Shire horses in the Grand National or running collies against greyhounds. For Blacks are inherently likely to dominate sprints, boxing and the like. Asiatics are, also for racial reasons, virtually excluded from such sports, while Blacks' denser bones bar them from excelling in swimming.



IT'S A MOCKERY: When the medal winners are all Black immigrants how can we say that 'Great Britain' beat 'Canada' in an athletics contest.

In the end each sport will be dominated by that ethnic group best fitted by its genes to do well. Making a mockery of susposed contests between countries When the medal winners are all Black immigrants, how can we say that 'Great Britain' beat Canada in an athletics contest. How does winning a race between eight Negroes make Linford Christie 'World' 100 metres champion? How does the victory of Black immigrant Lennox Lewis over Black immigrant Frank Bruno create a 'British' champion?

Isn't it time to end unfair multi-racial contests and give all the world's athletes and sportsmen in all sports a fair chance? The fair chance that comes from competing like with like, competing against their own kind.

Of course Negroes will generally beat White men off the sprint blocks and in the boxing ring, and Whites will generally beat Blacks in the swimming pool. So what? Racehorses will usually out-run humans, dolphins out-swim them, bears out-fight them, so no one even thinks of multi-species sports. For the same reason we should end multi-racial sports. They simply aren't fair, or sporting to anyone of any race.

BT USE CHEAP FOREIGN LABOUR!

DESPITE MAKING profits of £2bn in 1992, British Telecom has cut its work force by 80,000 in the last four years.

The company has run down staffing levels to the point ~~were~~ it is incapable of handling anything but day to day work. So when heavy rain during November and December caused havoc with communications, 250 engineers from Ireland's state backed telephone company Telecom Eireann were put under contract to carry out repairs.

To avoid embarrassment the Irish telephone engineers removed the distinctive TE logo from their vans.

No Need For A-Levels

BLACK AND ASIAN students will be able to attend university without having passed a single A-level exam.

A course focusing on Britain from a Black perspective has been set up in Manchester for coloured immigrants with no qualifications. After two years, successful students will be awarded a certificate of credit, a recognised qualification for full-time degree study.

POLLUTION AT SEA

BRITAIN HAS defied lobbying of environmental groups and refused to support a world-wide ban on dumping nuclear waste at sea. For the last ten years a voluntary ban has been in place but this was recently broken by Russia.

The decision to abstain came at a meeting of the International Maritime Organisation and means the Government could resume dumping radioative material at any time.

Environmentalists claim radioactive substances in the seas respect no boundaries and that monitoring and retrieving leaky containers is significantly more difficult from oceans than land-based stores.

Before the voluntary ban, Britain had dumped about 74,000 tons of low and intermediate level waste at 15 locations.

Four other countries also abstained during the IMO vote. They were France, Belgium, China and Russia.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The National Front has applied to the Metropolitan Police for permission to hold a demonstration against a march in support of the IRA.

The march is due to take place in London on Sunday 23rd January 1994.

Members and supporters of the National Front are asked to support this demonstration as a show of solidarity with our fellow countrymen in Ulster.

Full details of the demonstration can be obtained by telephoning . .

NEWS ROUND-UP

DECEMBER 15th was a black day for Britain. On three fronts our beleaguered island and its people were dealt crushing blows as our Government signed away our future.

Third World Trade

DECEMBER 15th 1993: The Government agreed to allow Third World sweatshop manufactured goods to flood unopposed into Britain putting tens of thousands of British workers on the dole.

John Major signed the GATT world trade agreement and dispatched British workers to the dole queue. 103 countries signed the agreement but only the Third World countries using their sweatshop workers will benefit from it.

To multi-national companies and the City - the Tory Government's paymaster - GATT means bigger profits because of lower wages. To the island of Britain it means that our goods become too expensive for the world market, leading to factories closing and jobs being lost.

On December 15th John Major signed away the last remnants of Britain's manufacturing industry.

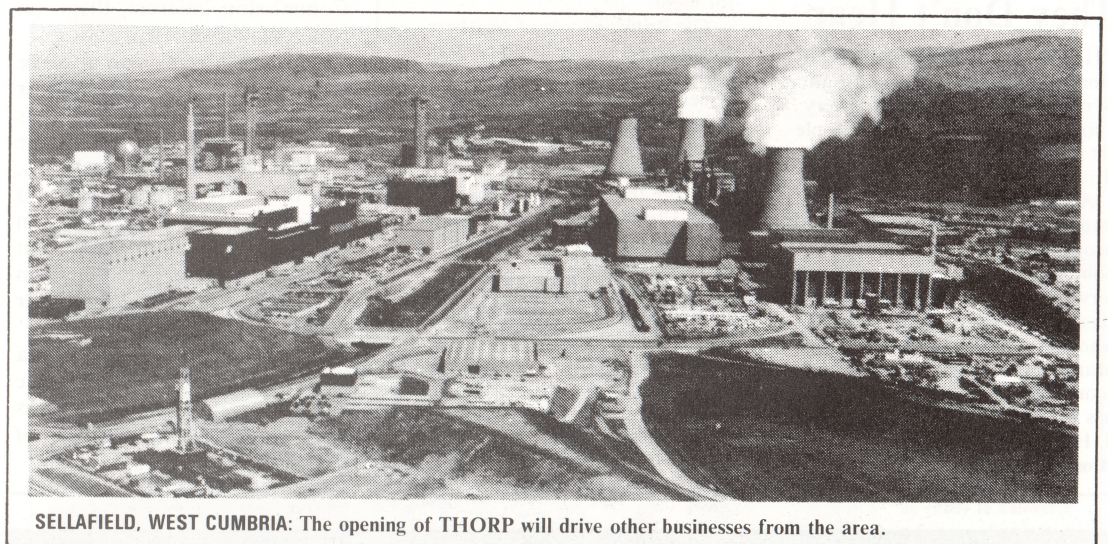
Betrayal of Ulster

DECEMBER 15th 1993: The British Government signed away part of Britain to a foreign power.

The agreement between John Major and Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds is a blueprint for a united Ireland and the betrayal of the loyal British people of Ulster.



SELLAFIELD, WEST CUMBRIA: The opening of THORP will drive other businesses from the area.

The Peace Accord clearly states . . "The British Government agrees that it is for the people of the island of Ireland alone to exercise their right of self-determination . . . The Taoiseach . . accepts on behalf of the Irish goverment that the democratic right of self-determination by the people of Ireland as a whole must be achieved . . .".

That means the loyal British majority in Ulster becomes a minority within the Republic of Ireland.

The Government decision on December 15th betrayed the people of Ulster.

Nuclear Waste Dump

DECEMBER 15th 1993: The Government gave the go-ahead for Britain to become the nuclear waste dump for the rest of the world.

By allowing British Nuclear Fuels to open their Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant (THORP) at Sellafield in West Cumbria, the Government has put the health and safety of the British people at risk. They have also brought further misery to one of Britain's unemployment black spots.

No new firms or businesses will locate to an area that is storing the world's nuclear waste, and when leases are up, existing employers won't think twice before moving on to a more business-friendly area.

THORP imports foreign nuclear waste to reprocess it into plutonium and uranium. The by-products should then be returned to the country from which it came but now foreign governments have made it clear that they will refuse to accept it.

THORP will just have ten years service before there is no longer any demand for the products it provides. Decommissioning of the plant will take 25 years by which time West Cumbria will be a barren coastline inhabited only by the workers of the nuclear plant.

The Government's decision on the 15th December has sounded the death knell of part of Britain.

A MEASURE OF OUR DECLINE

I SUPPOSE that it is a measure of the decline and imminent fall of the White race that the vacuous world of showbiz now seems to dominate the Western ethos. Even knowing this, it was something of a shock to me when the doings and undoings, appearances and disappearances of a person called Michael Jackson were the first items on BBC news bulletins for days on end.

" . . . the vacuous world of showbiz now seems to dominate the Western ethos."

This Jackson person is, I believe, some sort of pop star, in fact to be honest I know he is since I once heard a record of what I presumed to be a rather shrill choirgirl only to be told it was Michael Jackson. I don't really care if, as alleged, he is some kind of fruit or just a bleached coconut and I care even less if some creaky old boiler called, I understand, Elizabeth Taylor, is his dearest friend.

JACKSON: A pimple who the media makes important

But I do care that the standards of the media have become so debased that these pimples are of paramount importance.

That they believe themselves to be so is undoubtedly the case; indeed they believe themselves to be on a par with world statesmen. A dessicated female called Linda McCartney is a pop star once removed, being the wife of ex-Beatle Paul McCartney. On a tour of New Zealand with her husband, Ms McCartney saw it as her duty to give a dressing down to that country's Prime Minister Jim Bolger, calling him a fool because he owned a cattle ranch. Ms McCartney is a manic vegetarian and has lent her name to some vegetarian products that one sees in supermarkets which just goes to show how important she is. As for McCartney himself, he is not merely a very important person indeed but is positively holy.

" . . . indeed they believe themselves to be on a par with world statesmen."

In a recent interview in which he held forth on the earth shattering events concerning the aforementioned Jackson, McCartney described how he felt betrayed by his friend when Jackson brought up the rights to McCartney's songs and allowed them to be used as advertising jingles. Describing what a harrowing experience that had been to his countless admirers, McCartney declared "Some people think they're sacred".

Yegods!!!
